Be Content With To-day's Pleasures

You are face to face with pleasure,
Oh! won't you smile to-day?
The storms may rage to-morrow—
Your hope may be dismay.
You tread a pathway bright to-day,
Then can't you hum a tune?
To-morrow's road may have some thorns,
And not a flower to bloom.
To-day your life is sunshine,
No clouds are in the skies.
To-morrow may bring you sadness
And sorrow on surprise.
To-day you have no sickness
To make a gloomy home—
Your cares are light, the present bright,
Wherever you may roam.
And yet to-morrow's dawning sun
May bring the saddest doom.
The one you cherish most on earth
May journey to the tomb.
And as you overcome to-day
The troubles that you face,
Just trust in Providence to-morrow
And in His saving grace.

Death of Clyde Young.

After a four week's illness, Clyde Young died at the home of his father, Mr. B. H. Young, Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Mr. Young died of an abscess of the brain and during the time of his sickness had been an intense though a patient sufferer.

Clyde was the youngest son of Mr. Ben Young and the youngest of a family of eleven children, seven boys and four girls, and was about twenty years of age at the time of his death.

The funeral services were held Monday morning at St. Dominic's church.

To his aged parent and his brothers and sisters The Sun joins with the others who knew and loved the boy in extending condolence.

MORNING BLAZE

Grocery of Mr. J. K. Cheatham Catches Fire at Early Hour.
Fully Insured.

This morning at about 1:30 fire was discovered in the frame store room on Wall street occupied by Mr. J. K. Cheatham's grocery. When discovered the fire had evidently been burning for some time as a dense pall of smoke hung over the vicinity of the building, while the flames had eaten entirely through the floor at the rear. Immediately after the alarm was sounded the fire department turned out and within a short time had the flames under control.

The building in which the fire occurred is owned by Mr. John R. Barber, but is leased by Mr. C. A. Thompson, who carried no insurance. Mr. Cheatham carried $700 insurance on his stock of groceries, which will fully cover his loss.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

Giving Satisfaction.

The automobile line between here and Lebanon which was established last week is giving eminent satisfaction to the traveling public and is doing a good business. Another car will be in service this week and next for the convenience of those who wish to attend the Chautauqua.

Mr. Gratz, who runs the machine, wishes the public to know that he will drive his machines in the most careful manner. Whenever Mr. Gratz meets a person driving a horse which appears to be frightened he immediately stops his machine and if necessary leads the obstreperous animal past. All that anyone with a horse afraid of autos has to do when meeting Mr. Gratz is to hold up his hand and the chauffeur will promptly stop and give assistance.

Death of Mrs. Wright.

A very sad death occurred near Gasburg Friday when Mrs. Annie Edelen Wright, wife of Dr. Spencer Wright, passed away after a five months' illness. Tuberculosis was the cause of Mrs. Wright's death.

Mrs. Wright was only about twenty-five years of age at the time of her death. She was the daughter of Mr. John Edelen, and about five years ago was married to Dr. J. Spencer Wright, one of the most prominent young physicians of the county. To them one child, a son, was born about four years ago. The little son as well as the husband survive the deceased.

The funeral services were conducted at St. Rose Saturday morning and the remains interred in St. Rose cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank our many friends for their kindness and many favors which we received during the sickness and death of our baby, and may they be richly rewarded in the future are wishes. Frank H. and Nannie J. Ash.

CONGRESSMAN BEN JOHNSON TO THE RESCUE OF GROWERS

Finds Dangerous Inaccuracies and Inexcusable Blunders in Bradley Amendment to Tobacco Schedule and Has Demanded Corrections.

(Meade County Messenger.)

The tobacco schedule of the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill is a most non-sensical and dangerous conglomeration. Indeed, it is the worst misfit ever turned out by the Great National Tailoring Shop, where "law-suits" are made.

This fact was clearly demonstrated in an interview by Congressman Ben Johnson, printed in the Courier-Journal of Wednesday, July 12. Unless these inexcusable defects are remedied the tobacco grower will be placed between the devil and the deep blue sea when he commences to do business under the new tariff law. However, the editor of the Messenger has the utmost confidence in Mr. Johnson, and feels that he will straighten out matters, and save the tobacco farmers from ruin.

The tobacco schedule of the Aldrich-Payne amendment are loaded with dangerous errors, and if Congress neglects, or refuses, to make the changes as pointed out by Mr. Johnson the tobacco industry in Kentucky will be crippled beyond repair.

These misfits may not be intentional; they may be errors, pure and simple, yet many of us who are acquainted with the cloudy tactics of the American Tobacco Company, are skeptical; we can not but feel that the Italian hand of the trust is again endeavoring to "shape our destinies."

To the average mind no trick is revealed by reading the tobacco schedule; it seems as simple as "a b c"—a sort of "dodge-better-by-us" than the tobacco schedule of the Dingley bill, but to the student of such things the imperfections are readily seen.

While the so-called gladiators and self-styled watch-dogs of the tobacco growers were spilling denunciatory manner before both branches of Congress, and incidentally working the newspapers for "puffs" Ben Johnson was digging into the intrigues of the tobacco schedule. Deep in the mysteries of words he saw "arrows and slings" that the trusted "watch-dogs" failed to see. And through Mr. Johnson's work it is apparent that the tobacco grower is to be rescued from the snare into which either ignorance or criminal perversity was about to lead him.

The Messenger takes off its hat to Congressman Ben Johnson, and congratulates the tobacco growers of Kentucky upon having a Representative in the National Congress who can "smell a rat," or "see a nigger in the woodpile" even if they have been covered by the dark fabrics of a language manufactured in the minds of Aldrich and Payne.

The inaccuracies in the tobacco schedule as cited by Mr. Johnson, and printed in the Courier-Journal, are as follows:

"By line 7, page 399, of the tariff bill, no one can manufacture tobacco or make snuff for himself, not even from tobacco grown by himself, and by line 16, same page, it is emphasized that no one can 'twist' even for his own use, and of his own growth, without putting himself under the ban of being a manufacturer. By line 22, same page, it is made lawful to buy 'AND' sell, whereas many may wish to buy 'OR' sell the untempered tobacco without the tax. In fact, all the farmers wish to sell, while few of them wish to sell without first trying that which they sell. By changing it from 'to buy and sell' to 'buy or sell' the defect would be cured.

"A similar error exists in line 22, page 400, where it is made the duty of the farmer 'producing or selling' to make certain reports to the Collector of Internal Revenue, while it should read the farmer 'producing and selling,' as there can be no sort of reason why a farmer who produces, but who produces for his own use only, and who does not sell, to make any report at all.

"On page 400, line 21 to line 6 on page 401, every tobacco grower is required to report to the Collector of Internal Revenue each and every sale made, no matter how large or how small the quantity, stating the quantity sold, to whom sold, together with residence of the purchaser.

"The report has gone out over the country that a sale of less than ten pounds does not have to be reported to the Collector of Internal Revenue, but such is not correct."

One of the most dangerous errors, it is an error, in the Bradley amendment as the feature making it compulsory that the tobacco grower keep a set of books. Senator Bradley failed to embody in his amendment that sales of ten pounds and less, and as much as a hoghead, shall be permitted, without the grower furnishing to the Collector of Internal Revenue an itemized statement of sales. Therefore, if the farmer sells a pound, or a thousand pounds, or any amount of tobacco, he must render an account to the Revenue Agent. Furthermore, the grower will have to appear before an official, empowered to administer an oath. The Internal Revenue Department will demand that this shall be done. The officials' fee, will be from 25c to 50c, it matters not if the grower has sold no more than ten cents' worth of tobacco. Besides, the grower may have to go ten or fifteen miles to find a Notary Public, and lose a day's time. Even with this correction the Bradley amendment will be of little good to the tobacco grower, but without the correction as cited by Mr. Johnson it would amount to practically an unsurmountable barrier in the pathway of every grower in the land.

Here we have a pretty verification that a close application to business bears more fruit than empty words and bluster. While others were spilling to deaf ears in the Speakers' chairs, of the House and Senate, and turning anxious faces to the galleries, Ben Johnson, the unostentatious and brainy Congressman from the Fourth District, was looking into the remote recesses of that tobacco schedule—excavating, as it were, in mountains of figures and confusing sentences. He came forth bearing the trigger of the trap so artfully set to ensnare the tobacco grower, and he thrust it into the lap of Congress and demanded that the Representatives remove the danger.

We have heard it said that the bee that does the loudest buzzing does the least work. The editor of the Messenger is not sufficiently posted on "beology" to verify the truth of this statement, but he has been a student of "men and affairs" long enough to know that this is true of men, and that the man who does the loudest talking does the least work.

Now, the editor of the Messenger would in nowise detract from the glory that some of the Senators and Congressmen are taking to themselves on account of the different parts they played in shaping the tobacco schedule of the tariff bill. If any man can add anything in the Aldrich-Payne tariff measure over which to thrill his soul, let him proceed to glorify, for never before has man seen a thing as full of iniquity as this bill.

To those gentlemen who denounced the bill upon both floors of Congress we extend our thanks. Those speeches read well and sounded patriotic. It sometimes strengthens the soul, and makes the body more tense in conflict to hear the unrighteous denounced. But the man to whom we are most indebted is the man who maps out the field of battle, and then leads up to victory. Therefore, if the tariff schedule and the Bradley amendment are "overhauled" and rebuilt in such a way as to make them worth while to the grower, then the people have Congressman Ben Johnson, of the Fourth Kentucky District, to thank. He has shattered the breast-works of the tricksters, and mustered the boys for the onslaught.

INHERITS FORTUNE

Mr. Geo. Wycoff, a Former Mackville Boy, But Now of Carlisle, Ky., Has Struck It Rich.

The Danville Advocate says: Mr. George Wycoff, of Carlisle, Ky., who graduated from the College of Law in Danville about six years ago, has struck it rich. Since graduation he has been practicing in Carlisle and investigating his title to one hundred acres of property on Manhattan Island, and his part of the property will aggregate over a million dollars. During the early days of New York, Mr. Wycoff's grandfather owned one hundred acres of land which he leased for a period of ninety-nine years. Said lease has just expired and Mr. Wycoff has been in New York running the questing of title down and has found that himself and another grandson living in New Orleans are the sole heirs. On the property over eight million dollars worth of buildings have been erected and in accord with the law of New York he is given four years in which to raise the eight millions necessary to reclaim the property. The American Security Company, of New York, has entered into an agreement to furnish the necessary funds and young Wycoff will shortly take possession of a large slice of the city. His legal information has certainly served him well.

Property Sold.

Four pieces of valuable real estate were sold at the Court House door Monday, County Court day, pursuant to decrees and orders of the Washington Circuit Court. Three pieces of property belonging to the estate of M. L. Servey were sold as follows: The tobacco warehouse near the depot to B. D. Lake for $2,825. The store houses on West Main street to J. C. McElroy for $3,165. The frame residence on East Main street to G. C. Wharton for $800.

The undivided interest of A. M. Alexander in the Archie Mayo estate brought $607. The Temple National Bank, of Belton, Tex., being the purchaser.

Hatchett-Rogers.

The marriage of Miss Mallye Hatchett, of Tatham Springs, to Mr. Oliver Rogers, of Taylorsville, will take place at Mount Olivet church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Miss Hatchett is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Hatchett, and is a popular young lady. Mr. Rogers is a popular young business man of Taylorsville.

Unusual Accident.

Last week Mr. Chas. D. Miller, who lives about five miles from town lost a valuable mule in a very peculiar manner. Geo. Wright, a colored tenant of W. H. Leachman, lives across the road from Mr. Miller. The mule got out from Mr. Miller's place and went over to Wright's where it fell into an open well which is about twenty feet deep. The next morning when Geo. went for water he discovered the mule which was standing in the water which was not deep. A derrick was secured and the mule lifted out. It died three days afterward from the shock of the fall. The mule was a first class work animal and was valued at $165.

Nad "At Home."

Nad Hardin was given $50 on one charge and $2.50 on another in police court yesterday morning. According to the evidence Nad got drunk Saturday and raised considerable disturbance in Hocker and continued his debauch the next day, fighting with Lucy Clay and Anna Ray, both of color, and throwing rocks into the latter's house. Nad acknowledged having been drunk and cursing, but denies that he intended or desired to do the women any harm. Nad showed the effects of the fight more than the women did as his face was covered with cuts and scratches which he said were inflicted with a shovel.

Form A Partnership.

The Farmer's Home Journal in its last issue contained the following item of local interest:

Judge I. H. Thurman, of Springfield, has formed a partnership with Mr. Frank Peters, of Lebanon. They recently purchased from Mr. Allen S. Edelen, of Bourbon, Ky., the fine brood mare Bourbon Belle by Bourbon King, dam by Eric Chief, 2nd dam by Indian Chief, Messrs. Thurman and Peters have gotten together a very select lot of saddle brood mares and expect to breed them to Bourbon King and Bohemian King. They are on the look out for a suitable stallion to head their herd, but he must be of the Chief strain.

Chescheir-Kirby.

Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield Kirby, of Bowling Green, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Clara Hines, to Mr. Russell Chescheir, of Louisville, the wedding to take place in the early fall.

Mr. Chescheir is well known here, where he made his home until a few years ago. He is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Chescheir and now holds an important position with the L. & N. Ry Co.

$10,000,000.00 LIFE INSURANCE

Company for Louisville and Kentucky.—Its Mission Will be to Write Insurance and Re-insure Other Companies.

W. H. Gregory, president of the Citizens' Life Insurance Company; Helm Bruce, the general counsel of that company, and a number of other officers have announced their plans for organizing in Kentucky a ten-million dollar life insurance company. The company is to have five millions of capital and five millions of surplus, and the promoters declare its purposes will be to write life insurance and to reinsure other companies.

Its charter will authorize it to write both participating and nonparticipating insurance. According to President Gregory's announcement, the home office and headquarters of the new company will be located in Louisville, but its legal home will be at Beechmont or some other incorporated town outside of the city limits of Louisville. The purpose in incorporating the company outside the city of Louisville is to save city taxes, which on such corporation as is planned would amount to thousands of dollars a year.

Mr. Gregory says that the organization of the company will be a big thing, not only for the city of Louisville, but the State of Kentucky, as it will give to the city and State one of the largest life insurance companies in the world. He says that it will become a good feeder for the banks and the State and the entire South, and will aid in making Louisville a financial center just as the big Eastern life insurance companies have made the banks of New York dominant powers in the financial world. The people of Kentucky alone are now paying for ordinary life insurance more than six and one-half millions of dollars annually, and he says the interest earnings on this sum alone if kept at home would be of untold advantage to the State.

Many of the officers in the Citizens'

Life Insurance Company will be officers of the new corporation. W. H. Gregory will be the president of the big company and Helm Bruce will be the general counsel. Chas. D. Pearce, the banker, of Mayfield, will be first vice president of the new company and L. W. Key, of Mayfield, will be treasurer. R. E. Gregory, now a vice president of the Citizens, will be second vice president of the new company, and J. W. Lam, of Greenville, will be the third vice president. Frank M. Fisher, of Paducah, J. Whit Potter, of Bowling Green, Geo. Bohon, of Harrodsburg, and Geo. Alexander, of Paris, all of whom are directors in the Citizens' Life Insurance Company, are among the promoters of the new corporation. However, President Gregory says that any number of prominent capitalists and business men of Kentucky are interested in the new concern and that many of the State's strongest financial institutions are behind it.

The Board of Directors of the new company will be increased to thirty-six members, and will be composed of the most prominent and influential men. Mr. H. Z. Churchill, under direction of Mr. Gregory, has been in charge of the work, making preliminary plans for the new concern.

Mr. Gregory said a name for the new company had not been selected yet, but would be shortly. He said one of the cardinal principles of the new corporation would be to keep the money of the company invested in the territories from which they come.

One of the chief reasons for the organization of this big company is to keep this vast amount of money at home and available for the development of the natural resources of the South. Consequently the scheme of organization which has been planned is to have the main office and headquarters for the company in Louisville, with a branch at Atlanta, Ga., to be known as the Southern branch; one at Philadelphia, to be known as the Eastern branch; one at St. Louis, to be known as the Western branch; one at Chicago, to be known as the Northern branch, and one at San Francisco, to be known as the Pacific Coast branch. It is proposed to give self-government to each of these branches as far as practicable; in other words, the plan of organization would contemplate that each branch should be in charge of a vice president, a secretary, an assistant counsel, and an assistant treasurer, a medical director, a cashier and a financial board. The plan also contemplates a board of one or more resident directors who will be residents of the territory in which the branch is located and who will also be members of the board of directors of the company. It is also the plan that all moneys paid into these branches are to remain in the branches and are to be invested in the territory from which the branch office gets its support.

Dartmouth's New Head.

Professor Ernest Fox Nichols, the new president of Dartmouth college, is known to scientists the world over for his work and discoveries in physics. He succeeds Dr. William Tucker, who resigned two years ago because of ill health.

Professor Tucker is a native of Kansas, forty years old and was educated at the Kansas Agricultural college and Cornell university. After five years abroad at the universities of Cambridge and Berlin he returned to this country and was appointed professor of physics and astronomy at Colgate university. He occupied this chair until 1898, when he was called to Dartmouth.

ERNEST FOX NICHOLS.

month to become professor of physics. He was called to the chair of experimental physics at Columbia college in 1903.

Professor Nichols' works in physics include many important discoveries, among these being the measurement of heat waves larger than any hitherto known and the measurement of heat radiation of the planets Jupiter and Saturn. He is the author of several papers and magazine articles on radiation and kindred researches contributed to American and foreign scientific periodicals.

He received the Rumford medal in 1904 and also the premium from the American Society of Arts and Sciences for his original work in radiation. Cornell university conferred the degree of doctor of science on him in 1897. Dartmouth gave him the same degree in 1905.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

When six months old the little daughter of E. N. Dewey, a well known merchant of Agnewville, Va., had an attack of cholera infantum. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was given and effected a complete cure. This remedy has proven very successful in cases of bowel complaint in children and when given according to the plain printed directions can be relied upon with perfect confidence. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take, which is of great importance when a medicine must be given to young children. For sale by the Leo Hayden Drug Co.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Selection of Mutton.

Mutton when good has the lean more inclined to a dark than a bright red. The grain is fine, and the fat is white. Small boned and short legged mutton is best eating. Pale colored and lean mutton is inferior meat. That which is clammy to the touch is unwholesome, probably diseased. Lamb is best when ten or twelve weeks old. The whole lamb at that age should not exceed forty pounds. When more mature it lacks the delicacy of young flesh and has not yet acquired the ripper flavor of prime mutton. Lamb should be small and fat. The leg joints being stiff and the vein in the neck blue denote freshness. The kidney should be small and the fat white and firm.

Beef Bars.

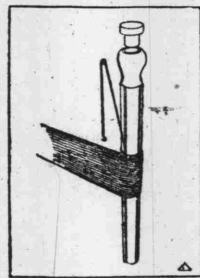

Get two pounds of round steak about one inch thick and pound out flat; then cut into strips two inches thick and six inches long. Make a dressing of stale bread, one egg, one onion, a small piece of butter, sage, salt and pepper to taste. Spread this dressing on strips of meat, roll up and pin each of the bars with toothpicks so as to hold them together firmly, so they will look like little roasts. Put butter and lard in a kettle and brown nicely on both sides, then add water enough to cover. Simmer for one hour and a half. Enough dressing will boil out to make a nice brown gravy.

Preserved Whole Gooseberries.

Make a strong sirup, two pounds of sugar to a pint of water. Pierce gooseberries in several places and put them in the sirup, then take them from the range and let the gooseberries remain in the sirup all night. In the morning reheat, stopping just short of boiling point, again letting berries stand overnight in sirup. While still cold place them in bottles and pour the sirup over them. Place bottles in water. Should the berries seem to be cracking before the water boils remove the bottles at once and seal; otherwise let stand until water is at boiling point.

Improved Curling Iron.

The device for making curls and puffs herewith shown consists of a single curling iron, which has grooves along its length large enough to receive one side of a double wire hook. The use of the device is as a safety pin. The hair is curled around the cylinder and over one end of the hook.

PIN HOLDS CURL SECURE.

and when the curl is made the hook is fastened at the free end, which is constructed to permit fastening, and the puff is held together until it can be pinned in place on the head. The device can also be used in curling natural hair, and the hook will hold the curl in shape until that shape is well set. This chief annoyance in rolling false curls is experienced in their coming unraveled before adjusted.

Codfish and Potato Hash.

Codfish in quantity to suit your taste; hashed potatoes well seasoned. Pick the codfish and soak in water overnight. Chop it fine with the potatoes in the proportion of one-fourth fish and three-fourths potatoes. Cut two large slices of fat salt pork into dice and fry crisp. Mix the cracklings of the pork, the potatoes and codfish in the skillet and heat until browned lightly. Turn and brown the other side. Serve with mustard.

Bacon With Bermuda Onions.

Peel a sufficient number of medium sized Bermuda onions, drop into salted boiling water and stew gently until tender, but not broken. Lift out of the water and stand upright in a buttered baking dish. On the top of each onion lay a very thin slice of breakfast bacon and sprinkle it with paprika. Stand in a hot oven until the bacon is cooked and the onions nicely browned.

Peppers In Brine.

Green peppers may be put away for winter use in the same way as other green vegetables. Wipe them well and place in large stone jars and cover with sufficient brine strong enough to float an egg. Put on a cover of wood or a wooden cover smaller than the jar and a weight on top to keep the peppers under the brine, or they may be canned or put in brine in glass jars.

Southern Stew.

Cut two pounds of veal in small pieces. Slice thin half a pound of salt pork. Add four-quarts of water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil one hour. Skim thoroughly, then add one chopped onion and two turnips chopped. Season well with pepper. Then put into a baking pan and simmer in it, or cover and let stew gently for two hours.

Edheima Stem Clothes

Young men's suits with plenty of grace and full of ginger—built in a way that grey-beards won't fancy and built in that fancy way because they're not meant for old folk. Wide-shouldered coats. Built-out chests and shapely waists. Full-pegged trousers with the new wide spring cuff at bottom. The shape that you find in 'em the first day will last to the last. It's permanent—tailored into the cloth—a matter of needle work—not pressing.

They wear so much longer that they're by all odds the cheapest clothes when you divide the number of months through which they give satisfaction into the price you give for them.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed it has a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation is taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Theologian and Educator.

Professor George Burman Foster, who has just been dropped from the Baptist ministers' conference of Chicago, over exposure to his denial in a recent book of the divinity of Christ. The effect of the action of the conference is that Professor Foster cannot speak from any Baptist pulpit in Chicago. He has not been expelled from the church, but from the Baptist churches of that conference.

For the past fourteen years Professor Foster has been a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago, of which he was president for several years. In 1903

however, he was transferred from the divinity school to the philosophy department of the graduate school. Persistent attacks on Professor Foster by Baptist ministers because of his higher criticism and alleged unorthodox teachings are said to have occasioned this action. Before going to Chicago he had been pastor of a Baptist church at Saratoga, N. Y.

Professor Foster is a graduate of West Virginia university and of the Rochester Theological seminary. Later he studied at the universities of Göttingen and Berlin. He is a native of West Virginia and is fifty-one years old.

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and simplest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great liver laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, and in many cases a single bottle will cure the most obstinate case.

For example, John W. Lee, 419 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with constipation, flatulence, and it cured him. Mrs. B. Bachman, Jackson, Miss., writes: "I have found a cure. That is the object of my letter. I had liver trouble and I am cured. It is today."

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free bottle of the great liver remedy, if you will address. The sample will show you how it is to be used. It is a simple matter. It will start you on the cure of your liver trouble. It is the object of my letter to send you a free bottle of the great liver remedy. It is today.

If your letter is anything but a test, your address, if you want a free bottle of the great liver remedy, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 504 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

We wish to felicitate the teachers of Washington county upon the excellent Institute which was held here last week. Each one in attendance--and all were in attendance--seemed to be imbued with the spirit of better educational conditions and of doing all within their power to have better schools in Kentucky.

Prof. Mackenzie, the instructor, by his earnest and intelligent talks entertained and instructed the teachers and visitors present and inspired them to do even more than heretofore. Prof. Colvin, as Chairman, could not have been improved upon.

All in all the Institute of 1909 was the best ever held in the county.

Vote for the Good Roads Amendment.

If there is a tobacco grower in Kentucky who is hesitating about whether or not he should vote for the good roads amendment next November, it might be profitable for him to take a few minutes time and make a little calculation of what it would be worth in cash to him in hawling his tobacco to the railroad over a good smooth, hard road rather than over the present hilly mud road which so many farmers are compelled to use. We know from both observation and experience that in many counties of the State, one or two hhd's. of tobacco is all that a good two horse team can pull over the roads they now have. And in many cases one hhd., is the limit. With the right kind of road the same team would pull four or five hhd's., with more ease and in almost half the time that they now pull one. In fact we know of many localities when after Christmas it is difficult to get a team to the station with an empty wagon. Figure up the number of trips you make to your town or railroad station during the year, the wear and tear on teams and wagons, loss of time and many other things, and then get all your neighbors to vote for the good roads amendment in November.

PUT TWAIN AT TOP

HUMORIST DECLARED LAZIEST MAN IN NEWSPAPER GAME.

Printing Office "Cub" Relates How Forty Years Ago the Popular Writer Would Bribe Him Not to Be Disturbed.

W. Landstetl is the grizzled foreman of the Lyons Republican, which is the Republican organ of Wayne county, New York.

"I've been in this business for 50 years now," he said to a reporter as he stroked his gray mustache, "and I have seen some lazy people in my time. Yes, sir, while the newspaper business is exciting and telling on the nerves, it does harbor some real lazy folks from time to time."

"Whom do you consider the champion lazy man of the newspaper game?" he was asked.

"That is so easy to answer," was his reply, with a wan smile. "Almost any of the real old-timers in this business would give you his name right off the bat. Why, Mark Twain holds the belt."

The Republican's foreman reflected, "I was a printer's devil on the Buffalo Express 40 years ago," he said, "and one of my duties was to sweep the room where reporters and editors worked. Every day during the time that Mark was a partner in the publication of the Express I was bribed by him in the cause of rest and ease. I would sweep every corner of that room, and when I came to Mark's desk, on which his feet reposed, he would look me over and ask me to go away. 'I don't want my part of the office cleaned up,' he would say. 'Please don't make me move. I'm as comfortable.' Then he would give me a nickel to get away from him and leave him in his own corner without any of the debris of the business cleared away. He would rather die there in the dust and truck than unscotch his legs or tilt his chair back so that I could sweep up."

Brother Landstetl stopped the press long enough to find out what was chipping the corners of his pages as they were swept downward from the big rollers.

"Yes, sir," he ruminated, "he was certainly lazy. One day he gave me a nickel to do it in his copy for him. He did certainly enjoy life, that man did."

Women and the Stage.

David Helasco was in his best mood at a dinner at the St. Regis preceding his vacation—his first vacation in 26 long, hard years.

Mr. Helasco, in the course of a learned review of barefoot dancing, problem plays and such like outcroppings of stage history, smiled and said:

"It may be true, as some have claimed, that immoral plays are due to the insular taste of women. Yes, that may be true; but, gentlemen, did you ever watch at the theater an elderly, staid, perhaps somewhat unprepossessing wife, brooding over a husband a little younger than herself? These wives, surely are no supporters of the immoral stage spectacle."

"Such a wife sat in one of my theaters during the production of a drama. The heroine, a beautiful girl, said at a dramatic moment:

"Merciful heavens, I am undone!"

"The wife rose hurriedly. 'Come, Clarence,' she murmured, 'We've had enough of this. I'm not going to have you drinkin' in any Saloon dance or diabolical act.'"

By ANNA B. PATTEN.

(Copyright, by Short-story Pub. Co.)

It was a steady downpour of rain, such as taxed the resources even of our merry house party, that sent me to seek amusement in the portrait gallery at Redfern. From the time of my arrival, a week before, I had loved to stroll there daily, speculating over the probable history of those knights in armor and bearded dames of the past. My special favorite, however, was the portrait of a lovely young girl kneeling before her prie-dieu, telling her rosary. She was not strictly beautiful, but her face wore such a sweetly pensive expression, with so rapt and tender a look in the eyes, that I could not lack only the halo to become a saint.

It was before this picture that I stood, absorbed in admiration, when the housekeeper stopped her from her way to her quarters. I took the opportunity of gratifying my curiosity.

"That picture? Oh, that is Saint Elizabeth," she announced in reply to my inquiry. "Poor thing!" brushing her apron across her eyes. "It's a sad story—the tragedy of the house, you know."

I did not know, but was so anxious to learn that Mrs. Fairbanks was finally prevailed upon to return with my sewing and relate the history of my favorite portrait. "And a long story it is," she precluded, as we settled ourselves in a cozy alcove where we could be free from interruptions, yet within sight of Saint Elizabeth at her devotions. "A long story, though her life was short enough, poor dear! There's very few people as knows it but me. My mother was housekeeper at the time, and she told me all the facts of the case."

After a brief silence, during which Mrs. Fairbanks stopped her front and gazed pensively at the Madonna-like face, as if questioning whether she should divulge its hallowed history, she continued:

"It was in Master Rupert's time. He was a queer piece, I should judge, from what mother said—a sort of mixture. His mother was Spanish, and he got his quick temper from that side of the house, but he was cold and self-contained on the surface, like all the Redferns. He was not what he did give way to his anger, it was something fearful. Mother said that at such times everybody got out of the way, who could be spared, and still he was flattered and made much of, for he was rich and titled, and the young ladies they smiled on him, and their mammae entertained him, and he was all of no use. He cared nothing for any of them. He but buried himself in the library with his books, or up in the studio with his pictures, for he was a fine artist and could have made a fortune with his brush if he had a mind to, which only goes to prove that the Bible tells the truth when it says: 'To him that hath shall be given.' Mrs. Fairbanks paused to take breath after this bit of Scriptural philosophy.

"So you see, after while the gentry folks they sort of gave him up. They all came to the conclusion that there never would be a mistress for the heir, but, bless me, they made a mistake! One summer Master Rupert flew off on a sketching trip—he was always doing that way, starting off without a moment's notice, and expecting his things to be all packed up and ready. Well, he met her by accident, in some out-of-the-way place, the mountains. And it was all up with him. He made up his mind to marry her on the spot. Every one wondered afterward at his choice. To be sure she had a lovely face, but then she was only a slim bit of a girl, with shy, shrinking ways; not at all the grand lady you'd think he'd have picked out for the mistress of this great house.

"As for the girl, poor little thing, living there in the wilds, she had nothing to say in the matter except her 'yes' at the altar. It was all fixed up between Sir Rupert and her mother; she simply obeyed her mother now, as she had done every hour of her life. It probably never occurred to her that she could do anything else. "Ah, but it was a gaily day, they say, when the master brought her home! The bells were rung, bonfires were built, and flower-girls strewed blossoms in their path. She seemed awed by all the splendor, and a little frightened at being the center of so much attention. She shrank closer to her husband and clung to him timidly, but, instead of cheering her by a sweet word of encouragement, he just spoke stern like to her, as if he reminded her of her duty. Oh, yes, he was fond of her; you could see that by the way his eyes followed her from place to place, but, like all the Redferns, he didn't believe in showing it.

"Well, there were gay goings-on for a time. The house was full of guests, and my lady was made much of, and some of her timidity was beginning to wear away; but now it was the master's turn to grow uneasy. It almost seemed as if he was jealous of every look and smile she gave another. You see he knew he hadn't touched her heart, and he feared to have it awakened. All at once he stopped inviting friends to the hall; he shut her up like a bird in a gilded cage, and gazed over her all to himself, in his cruel, selfish way. He loved to dress her up in jewels and fine clothes and pose her for different pictures—that is one of them that you admire so much.

"Then he took up his books again, and she must always be near by, curled up like a mouse in one of the lounging-chairs, ready to do his bidding. She yielded to him, as she had yielded to her mother, without a word of complaint. Only once she rebelled; that was when he scoffed at her devotion to her religion. Then she turned on him with a look in her eyes that told him he had gone too far. Perhaps he came to the conclusion that religion was not the worst rival a man could have; that, on the contrary, it was more than likely to keep a woman out of mischief. Anyway, it was plain enough to see, my mother said, that the poor, starved little creature must have some outlet for her pent-up affection, so she poured out her soul in devotion at the sacred shrine of the Virgin Mary. Perhaps she found there the mother love she had never known.

"Well, the master let her practice her whim undisturbed, so long as it did not interfere with his pleasure. The unused chapel was opened, and she spent hours at her avels and paters, many a day in penitential fasting, and priest came over from the adjoining diocese to hear her confession, though what misdemeanors such a saint from heaven could have to lay before the Lord alone knew. That was how she happened to get the name of Saint Elizabeth.

"Things went on in this same dull, prosy way for a time. With the coming of the cold winter season, Father Chapelle, who was getting along in years, found the journey too much to undertake, with all his parish duties, and sent one of the priests in his place. Mother said that young priest was a picture, with a voice to melt the heart of the most hardened sinner. He came into that gloomy house like a burst of sunshine, and not one of them all but felt better for his coming. As for Lady Elizabeth, she got so she leaned on him for comfort and advice at all times; he was her tower of defense in all her doubts and perplexities.

"It was some light gossip, in the village that first started the rumor flying. How any one could have connected a thought of evil with such as they God alone knows, but there are some weak bones as will sell their lips with any idle tale, and ill news travels fast. The only fear was that it might get to the master's ears, and he that unreasonable! He had taken no notice of the change, or, if he did, one priest was the same as another to him; but no one could help seeing the improvement in my lady. She had lost that listless look, and her whole manner was brighter and more hopeful. She tried now, in her timid, childish way, to elicit his kind remarks, using a thousand little feminine devices to arouse his attention. She did not make much progress, for once let him retire to a grove of selfishness and it is hard to root him out of it; but he used to watch her in a puzzled way, as if trying to find an explanation for the change.

"One day the crash came! Late in the afternoon the master dashed into the courtyard at a furious pace, his horse's sides flecked with foam. He reined the reins to the groom, who came hurriedly out to answer the summons.

"Send Hawkins to me!" was his order, as he strode into the house. Hawkins lost no time in following, nor may be sure. He found his master pacing up and down the room, his face as white as a sheet, and that boded no good to the object of his wrath.

"Where is your mistress? Send her to me!" he cried, in a hoarse, loud, ferocious voice. "She is in the chapel, my lord. Her orders were that she was not to be disturbed. Father Dominic comes directly."

"It would not do, miss, for me to repeat the master's reply," interpolated Mrs. Fairbanks, with a pious dread of her eyelids. "At any rate, it was something terrible, and Hawkins shook in his shoes while it went on; but in the midst of it the master stopped short as if struck with a sudden thought. 'Ah, I have it, just the thing!' he shouted, and he rushed into the hall toward the chapel. Hawkins following, for he feared for his life, as he had done every hour of his life, for to see his master walk into the sacristy, take down Father Dominic's robe and proceed to fling it on over his shoulders, was a sight he could not fully over his face! Hawkins stood like a log. He knew now what Master Rupert was about to do, before he saw him glide into the confessional where my lady knelt, waiting to open her innermost thoughts to his jealous scrutiny."

"But what a terrible position for Hawkins, Mrs. Fairbanks! What did he do?"

"Terrible doesn't begin to express it. My mother used to say that Hawkins was never the same man from that day. You see, he was in a tight place; he dared not reveal himself to his master in his present state of excitement, nor could he betray the scandal to any other member of the household. All he could do was to pace up and down the anteroom, wondering what was going on in that secret place behind the drawn curtains. Suddenly he heard the door open softly, and looking up, he saw Father Dominic himself walk into the sacristy, glance in astonishment at the empty hook, and then walk swiftly toward the confessional.

"It was a minute before Hawkins could pull himself together. He had not once thought of this probable outcome of the tragedy. With terror of the coming revelation, he sprang forward to intercept him, but he was too late. Father Dominic lifted the curtain, and my lady, glancing up, startled by the interruption, saw his face. She sprang to her feet, staring dazedly from one quiet figure to the other. She drew her hand across her forehead in a bewildered way, then suddenly darted forward and tore the cover from the other's face. When she saw what it revealed she gave a shriek of horror and sank down at his feet!"

"Not dead!" I exclaimed, quite overcome by this startling development.

"Yes, stone dead! She never breathed again. It was her heart, the doctor said, and true enough, hadn't she had enough to break a heart of granite?"

"Oh, please go on, Mrs. Fairbanks. What happened next?"

"The housekeeper shook her head mournfully.

"There isn't much more to tell, Hawkins said as how he heard his breath as the two men faced each other, both so white and stern. His master's eyes had lost their wild glare, they had look of one that worshipped those of the priest, and his hands had been clenched so fiercely that they had left the marks of the nails in his palms. He caught the priest fiercely by the arm. 'Is it true,' he whispered, hoarsely, 'what she confessed here at my feet, that she was trying to make me pure for her—that worshipped her—night and morning she prayed for this—it was the hope of her life?' The priest bowed his head solemnly.

"Too true, dear saint! Sometimes she was almost disheartened by her coldness toward her, but she never quite despaired."

"The master fell back as if he had been struck a blow."

"My God! and I had to sit silent for fear of revealing myself, and now it is too late! Strike me, priest, where I stand, a blasphemous word. Do you hear? You will not? Your sacred calling forbids it, eh? But it would not have spared you from my hand. I came here to kill you, and now I have slain her, the innocent lamb! A life for a life, your Bible says—and before the priest could prevent him he drew a pistol from his pocket and shot himself through the heart."

In the silence that followed the somber close of the housekeeper's story I turned once more to the portrait of Saint Elizabeth, wondering whether she had at last found compensation for her short life's tragedy. A pale sunbeam that broke through the clouds just then touched the sword's glint head as with the halo outlined by the painter; that was my question's only answer.

Summer Lying Opens with a Bang Out in Kansas.

Kansas opens the season for hunting and fishing stories with a cash prize that makes other people sit up and take notice. Comrade Thomas B. Murdock, Ninth Kansas cavalry, who has been publishing the "Barnyard" (Kan.) Republican for 40 years, makes a long-distance and successful leap for the center of the stage by his story in reply to one by Owen Wilbur. Comrade Murdock turns to his war diary, and finds that in October, 1862, his company was at Fort Halleck, near Medicine Bow river. A mile or so northeast of the fort was a lake, which was nightly covered with wild fowls. Every night there would be a great number of birds, and they would be gathered together in the middle of the lake. Murdock and some of his comrades put in their time for days preparing for a shooting excursion. They had a mountain hewer that held an even bushel. They awiped four boxes of ammunition from the quartermaster and took from each cartridge the lead and put in a grove of six buckshot it contained. They put the powder into a flour sack, and estimated that they had 700 Mississippi yager slugs and 4,200 buckshot. They pulled the hewer out to the lake, and planted it so as to sweep the center, the muzzle being on a level with the water. A hurried survey showed them that there were about 17,000 ducks feeding in the moonlight, sweetly enjoying themselves and dreaming of no danger. When the lanyard was pulled the foundations of Medicine Bow mountain trembled. The boat was manned to either up the booty, while two of the boys rushed back to the fort for a six-mile team to haul in the game. As a good soldier, Comrade Murdock had to make a careful count of the booty, and he gives this as the result:

Canada geese	125
White geese	125
Brant	25
Calliope	25
Canada backs	125
Blue birds	125
Pin tails	125
Unknown geese	125
Unknown ducks	125
Sandhill cranes	125
Widgeon	125
Grand total	1,540

And it should be recalled that the shot brought a sort of speckled trout to the surface of the water, which were gathered up and taken to the fort. The Ben Holiday stage line, as far east as Virginia Dale and as west as the North Platte river, was bountifully supplied with ducks, geese and mountain trout the next day, to the delight of the overland trail. As the Eagle man knows nothing about war, we will inform him that when the geese and ducks had all been counted, each soldier of the Ninth Kansas cavalry company had a pillow. We have our yet.

Recently we stood upon the highest mountain in the chain of the Rockies.
What a stupendous sight this giant is,
as he lifts his hoary head, always covered with snow, above the floating clouds and far above all surrounding mountains. From beneath he seems to be battling with the clouds. They assail him and try to overwhelm him.
But on a perfectly clear day what a grand sight this towering mountain is.
And from his gray peak the view is surprisingly beautiful. What incomparable forces must have been at work in creating this mountain. The whole top of the mountain is a vast expanse of broken rock. As if the crushing process had been complete, yet the lifting process began. The mountain still everything is, it seems a most sacrilege to break this silence. Be still and let the God of nature speak to you. Hear the noise the works of men speak. Hear the horizon extends far 150 to 175 miles.
They—great, big cities, are seen, but they may be covered by the mist of your thumb. God speaks of Himself everywhere in nature, in even the rose, but from nowhere as loudly as from the mountain tops. The mind is dazed as the tilted strata and the rocky rock-formations are observed and the crumbled masses broken into fragments. The mountain top is eloquent of divine wisdom—it stimulates the thought, it reaches humility, it compels adoration. If one is swelled up with self-contemplation he should visit the high mountains.

SUBURBAN GARDENS.... BYRON WILLIAMS

IT IS gratifying in the evening (twilight) to scratch in the suburban garden. In a prayerful attitude you kneel upon the moist earth and make drills for your radishes and onions. You stand by and clucks, holding the seeds while you scratch. And just as the rosy sun is setting in the west and the horizon is a faint blue, and you are flushed with the red and yellow colors, you drop the seeds
into the holes, cover it gently with rich, black loam and try to be as a student of a natural perpendicular pose.

Oh! Oh! How that kid who has been out in the garden does hurt!
And just as the sun is setting in the west and the horizon is a faint blue, and you are flushed with the red and yellow colors, you drop the seeds into the holes, cover it gently with rich, black loam and try to be as a student of a natural perpendicular pose.

After two weeks of waiting, you dig into the bed like a small boy investigating the mechanism of his new watch, and find the seeds have all rotted from too much water, and cold earth.

Then you try it again, and while you don't expect to have the first radishes in town, you expect to have radishes.
When the plants do arrive there are a dozen in a bunch. The book tells you to transplant.

My, but that is back-breaking work!
Mike offers to do it, but what good is a garden if you can't work it yourself?

And then comes a regular Cardinal
Wolsey frost and nips the shoots.
"Why, you shouldn't have planted radishes for two weeks yet!" admonishes a neighbor.

That makes you mad, and you quit gardening. Mike grins, orders more seeds and makes the finest plot in town. While you sit up in your room and write things, he transplants and cultivates and grins!

Now, what's the use of raising radishes, anyhow? Why, last week you wrote a story and sold it for enough to buy all the radishes in town!

Mike says the moral is that every man should stick to his trade. You say any fool ought to know how to raise a suburban garden.

Mike makes no reply. This is dangerous ground for him!

—Rag Time.

The book beer season has arrived.
Mayors who find their lamp posts twisted will know the reason why.

A country merchant advertises:
"Kid gloves 50 cents. They won't last long at this price." Of course not.

A Chicago man who can talk four languages is holding copy in a proof room for $12 a week. Again, let us pause to remark that silence is golden.

A correspondent wants to know what caused the original monkey and parrot time. I don't know, but a marriage license has caused a lot of them since then.

Queer Dance.
A Kansas paper says: A young man being hard up, pawned his dress suit. When his finances were in better shape, he redeemed the suit. One day his mother was looking over the suit and found a ticket on the coat—the pawnbroker's ticket. "My son," she said, "what is that?" Then the young man explained that he had attended a dance and, the room being very warm, the men took off their coats. The ticket was placed on the coat in the cloak room to identify it, he said. Then the mother found a similar tag on the pantaloons. "My son," she said, gravely, "What sort of a dance was that?"

Wretch.
Just because I am running for mayor out where I live, some editorial miscreant left the following clipping on my desk:

An unflattering way to tell a good man is by his having declined to run for mayor.

Many a girl dyes for the man she loves.

The A B C and X Y Z of ADVERTISING

A SERIES OF TEN TALKS ON ADVERTISING
written by Seymour Eaton of Philadelphia No. 4

Don't let newspaper circulation fool you. The newspaper which has the least power to sell goods usually makes the loudest shout about circulation.

Don't skip around from one newspaper to another.
Success in advertising comes from hammering away
at the same crowd.

Pick out the newspaper which has the kind of readers you want for customers and then stick. When you get things going keep your head. A lineup of canvassers from competitive newspapers will call on you immediately and show you by a process of arithmetic, or it may be of geography, that they can give you twice the circulation at half the price; that whoever advised you didn't know what he was talking about;
that if the paper your advertisement is in actually pays you their newspapers will certainly make you a millionaire.

They are all nice fellows and put up good lunches and you like to meet them. Each will tell you that your advertisement is the prettiest thing he ever saw and that your store is a perfect gem. But don't. You can't afford it; at least not unless you have sufficient advertising appropriation to keep copy in all the newspapers continuously.

An eight-inch advertisement in one newspaper will bring much bigger results than a two-inch advertisement in four newspapers.

If you advertise your store to a hundred and fifty thousand people you can safely bank on the fact that in due time everybody will hear about you.
People have a way of passing along good news.

The fact that your advertisement appears continuously in a reputable newspaper stimulates public confidence. Your shop advances step by step in the estimation of tens of thousands of people who may be months getting around to make their first purchase.

You can talk to a hundred and fifty thousand people any day of the week through a metropolitan newspaper and make your talk as personal as you wish. You need not employ an interpreter or use a megaphone. Simply talk. That's all. Be sincere about it. Let your words ring true. The people will listen. They like it.

Spend thousands a year on rent and electric light and experienced salesmen and then squeeze out a niggardly hundred or two on advertising—on telling the people that you have the store and the goods and the salesmen, all hanging around waiting. A retail shop that spends $5,000 a year on rent ought at the very lowest estimate spend $10,000 a year on advertising.

Your advertising is not a thing apart from your enterprise. It is your enterprise; a contagion which you yourself create and which, if thoroughly spread,
is as enduring as the everlasting hills.
